Introduction

Road Weather Information Systems (RWIS) are complex structures used for road maintenance decision support, which feature as a rule the following components: meteorological sensors and instruments, transmission technology, computer systems for processing, representation and storing of information, road weather forecasts and alarms, in relation to traffic control and traffic information systems and more.

Road weather observation and forecast are a set of road and atmospheric parameters and data used by the road maintenance services to determine future road conditions.

This part of EN 15518 lays down the requirements for the recommended road weather observation and forecast information of a RWIS.

The aim is to ensure extensive combination and interchangeability within the systems.
